Construction sector in Russia 2009

Development forecasts 2009-2012

Publication date: October 2009

Languages: English

Word from the author:

The construction industry in Russia has been hit hard by the global economic downturn. The slowdown on the domestic construction market began in 2008 and deepened in 2009, with 80% of construction projects suspended and virtually no new residential and commercial property projects started. For the first time in the current decade the value of construction works will shrink this year, by over 15% in comparison to 2008. However, the worst for Russia's construction is over now as the market will stabilise next year and return to a growth path in 2011.

Robert Obetkon, Senior Construction Analyst

About the report:

This third edition of PMR's popular report, Construction sector in Russia 2009, Development forecasts 2009-2012 provides readers with a timely assessment of the construction industry in Russia as a whole, describes conditions in each major segment – engineering, non-residential and residential construction – and explores the major opportunities for the coming years. It supplies vital new information on planned energy and transportation infrastructure projects.

As lagging economic conditions slow development and construction around the world, this report examines the reasons why Russia remains a country of continuing opportunity for construction related businesses and investors. The professionals at PMR have gathered all of the latest market intelligence and assembled it into this single clear, concise document – ready for delivery to you in convenient electronic format.
